

Dylan Gallacher

4/7 - Birthday parties can be very simple or extremely elaborate. Write a creative narrative story describing the main character's ultimate surprise party where something goes terribly wrong.

One day my friend invited me to their birthday party. I made a card and on it I drew him blowing out his Candles and everybody singing happy birthday to him. It was full of color. When I was done my parents drove me to the birthday party. On the way there we saw a mountain with snow all over the peak. It was very beautiful. We also heard a bunch of birds chirping, it was very beautiful to listen to. When we got there all the kids that were invited were playing on the bouncy house. It was green with some blue on it. When I got inside the bouncy house there was a mini basketball hoop with a little ball in it. It was very fun to play with. When I was done I decided Someone was supposed to buy the cake but they forgot to!!! So someone to play inside. It was fun playing there. I had a Nerf gun war with some of my friends that were invited. It was so fun. As soon as it was time for cake the Birthday boy's mom looked in the fridge but to her surprise there was no cake. else had to buy the cake. While we were waiting for a parent to come with the cake we all played in the bouncy house. It was very fun. But there was a little leak in the bouncy house and it deflated!!! So we all played inside the house. Eventually the cake came so it was time to eat. They put the candles in the cake, they put it on fire, and we sang Happy Birthday. He wished for something but we never will know because if you tell it won't come true. One of the parents cut the cake and the birthday boy got the first slice, then everybody else got served the cake. It was so yummy and it was chocolate with vanilla icing. The birthday boy said it was the best birthday ever. I guess it was sort of an adventure. It was a pretty fun birthday party as well everybody was happy there were some disappointments though The end!!!